Reading Lucy, Rereading Nature

An Ecological Approach to Wordsworth's Lucy Poems

Alex Jackson

Abstract

William Wordsworth's Lucy poems, a series of intriguing meditations on a mysterious female figure, are an indelible part of the Romantic canon. The scholarly fervour to discover Lucy's real-life counterpart has often led critics to consider these works psychoanalytically or biographically. Rather than situate these works in such a context, my paper looks to see how we can consider the Lucy poems as ecological endeavours – specifically, to observe how Lucy is used to reread nature and develop a new understanding of the environment. The scholarly fervour to discover Lucy's real-life counterpart has often led critics to consider these works psychoanalytically or biographically. Rather than situate these works in such a context, my paper looks to see how we can consider the Lucy poems as ecological endeavours – specifically, to observe how Lucy is used to reread nature and develop a new understanding of the environment. Using the theories of Timothy Morton's "The Mesh" as my foundation, I argue that Wordsworth's Lucy poems are non-anthropocentric

N. 2 (2017): Polaris. Psicoanalisi e mondo contemporaneo; n.2, 2017

Questo numero di Polaris riunisce i lavori presentati al Congresso Terza guerra mondiale? La gestione della morte tra le nuove emergenze sociali e la loro soluzione all'interno del simposio Terrorismo, conflitti e psiche: il gruppo come strumento di elaborazione e ha allargato ulteriormente i suoi orizzonti grazie all'attenzione data alla guerra negli scritti di Nadia Fina, Gabriella Mariotti e Robi Friedman e al contributo di Adone Brandalise.

Nadia Fina nell'analisi ricca e puntuale del pensiero di Jung rispetto alla guerra sottolinea l'importanza per l'autore della questione morale da cui non si può prescindere se si vuole comprendere il significato ultimo della vita. Il tema dell'etica ci rimanda a quello della responsabilità, che viene ripreso anche nel lavoro molto ben articolato di Gabriella Mariotti che prende in considerazione il carteggio fra Freud e Einstein rispetto alla guerra e il modo in cui Freud affronta il tema della distruttività

e dei conflitti insieme all'auspicio che la cultura di pace possa divenire "seconda natura". Robi Friedman nel suo

African Journals OnLine (AJOL) is the world's largest online library of peer-reviewed, African-published scholarly journals.

Historically, scholarly information has flowed from North to South and from West to East. It has also been difficult for African researchers to access the work of other African academics. In partnership with hundreds of journals from all over the continent, AJOL works to change this, so that African-origin research output is available to Africans and to the rest of the world.

AJOL is a Non-Profit Organisation based in South Africa.

Journal Hosting and Publishing-

The University of Alberta Libraries provides significant support to over 30 Canadian open access journals through our no-fee hosting service. We provide web hosting for journals using the Open Journal Systems (OJS) publishing software and provide several value-added services, including:

- OJS software hosting, updates and maintenance
- Article-level DOI creation and CrossRef registration through the EZID service
- LOCKSS archival preservation through COPPUL and PKP PLNs
- Inclusion with the University of Alberta and NEOS library systems, and the EBSCO knowledge base
- Referrals and assistance to journal managers and editors with journal set-up, management, and discovery of their content

For more information, see the related Memorandum of Understanding and contact Sonya Betz, Digital Initiatives Projects Librarian, sonya.betz@ualberta.ca to discuss whether our service is the right match for your journal.

Vol 1 (2018): 2017 SLC Writing Contest Winners

2017 was the inaugural year of the Student Learning Commons writing contest.

We had two categories in this contest: An Open Undergraduate Category and an SLC Peer Educator Category.

There were three prize winners and two honourable mentions in the Open Undergraduate category and one prize winner and two honourable mentions in the Peer category.

This journal collects all of the winning submissions and is intended to serve as the beginning of a database of model papers for strong undergraduate writing.

The image features a stylized logo for XML. The letters 'XML' are rendered in a bold, white, sans-serif font, centered within a rectangular orange field. This orange field is enclosed by a double-line border, with the inner line being a lighter shade of orange and the outer line being a darker shade. The entire logo is positioned on the left side of a white document-like background. To the right of the logo, there are several grey rectangular shapes of varying sizes and orientations, suggesting a page layout or a sidebar. The overall design is clean and modern.

This is a new, experimental service being developed by the Public Knowledge Project to provide unsupervised conversion of Word/compatible and PDF input to production-ready NLM3 XML, HTML, and PDF. This service is currently under active development and output will not be perfect. Contact Alex at garnett@sfu.ca with any questions, and watch this space over the coming months.

Tips on preparing your document:

- PDFs must have embedded text (i.e. created from an already-digital document). Scanned PDFs must have been OCR'd before being uploaded to our service (want us to add OCR support? ask!)
- Ideally, citations (in your document that point to your bibliography) are formatted as numbers in brackets, e.g. [10] or [11,12,13].
- Citations can also be formatted as single references in parentheses, e.g. (Clancy, 2010). Our software will re-style these citations

Title

Introducing Texture, an Open Source WYSIWYG Javascript Editor for JATS

Alex Garnett, Michael Aufreiter, Oliver Buchtala, Juan Pablo Alperin

Public Knowledge Project, Simon Fraser University; Substance Software GmbH

Texture is a WYSIWYG editor app that allows users to turn raw content into structured content, and add as much semantic information as needed for the production of scientific publications. Texture is open source software built on top of Substance (<http://substance.io>), an advanced Javascript content authoring library. While the Substance library is format agnostic, the Texture editor uses JATS XML as a native exchange format. The Substance library that Texture is built on already supports real-time collaborative authoring, and the easy-to-use WYSIWYG interface would make Texture an attractive alternative to Google Docs. For some editors, the interface could be toggled to more closely resemble a professional XML suite, allowing a user to pop out a raw attribute editor for any given element. Texture-authored documents could then be brought into the journal management system directly, skipping the conversion step, and move straight into a document-centric publishing workflow.
