This past year, I began developing Naverra Music Collective (@naverramc), a grassroots instrument library and mobile recording studio created with the intention of eliminating barriers in musical experience. It is typical that musicians of any age are limited to what instruments they have access to. Naverra aims to give individuals the opportunity to find their new favorite instrument, whether it's a banjo, a trombone, or anything in-between, without worrying if they will be able to afford it.

Naverra Music Collective also strives to develop a collection of recording equipment capable of delivering professional quality to hobbyist and rising star alike. Naverra strives to offer recording studio experiences that would normally be impossible without access to specialized equipment.

Through this program, everyone can participate in music-making and recording, helping to create life-long music enthusiasts and reduce the number of individuals that stop making music once it's no longer a required course.
